

EMMA CROSBY

TV Presenter
Former Anchor at Channel 5

Emma is a well-known and experienced UK television journalist.

Crosby started her career as a business presenter at CNBC, broadcasting out of London and New York, and later was Sky News' business presenter during the 2008 financial crisis. From 2003-2008 she presented on Sky News where her coverage of the Glasgow Airport terror attack earned her and her team a BAFTA for best news coverage. She co-hosted the popular ITV breakfast show GMTV and from 2011-2015, Crosby anchored Channel Five's flagship national evening news programme '5 News'. She returned to Sky News in June 2017.

Crosby's passion is travel writing and she is a proud ambassador for the charities SOS Villages, RSPCA and Kicks Count.

Alongside Crosby's broadcasting career, she is an experienced conference host, moderator and awards presenter. Crosby has worked with a wide range of businesses from multinationals to SME's and trade associations; helping them deliver fantastic events. Clients come from the world of banking, retail, pharmaceuticals, telecoms, media, technology, construction, services, manufacturing, events and charities.

With Crosby's background in financial journalism, she takes real pleasure in working with companies to understand their business and their goals for the event. And, after spending years anchoring TV news she is well equipped to handle anything that gets thrown her way and get the best out of speakers joining her on stage. Thanks to her combination of in-depth business knowledge and interviewing skills Emma creates the perfect foundation for every event.
