

TIM SCHLÜTER

TV Journalist
TV Presenter

Tim Schlüter is a multilingual TV-Journalist and conference presenter with a strong IT-Background from University studies and work experience. As a trained radio- and TV-presenter Tim has been presenting business events since 2006. Since then he has established a reputation of combining the seriousness any business requires with the human touch and liveliness that make an event truly memorable.

Born in 1970 in Osnabrück/Germany he graduated from Universities in both the UK (University of North London: English / German / Film Studies) and Germany (Universität Osnabrück: English / German / Political Science).

Long term work placements in London, UK and Lyon, France provided Tim with the international experience he now regularly uses at major events, such as the yearly Grand Opening of international IT-fair CeBIT, the FIFA world cup or business events in Monaco, Czech Republik, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Britain. He also knows Asian culture both from working in Asia and working with an Asian company for a German audience. His work experience includes the BBC, the most renowned German news programme "Tagesschau" and European news programme EURONEWS. Tim Schlüter is also known as a long-time host in German News-Channel NDR.

Since 1999 he coaches presenters, journalists and speakers, using professional equipment. Besides Tim is the founder of VoxR which provides event organisers with a software to allow more audience interaction, by means of votes or easy to implement Q&A sessions. He is the author of a book on social media in Germany and speaks on social media development.

He presents in German and English on mother-tongue level, speaks fluent Dutch as well as French and Spanish.

Topics (Selection):

- Facilitation
- Future of Media
- Communication
- Social Media